

In bullet 1 of Andy's message you can also say that the animation (rather than cartoon) was added to Glow after the consultation period (and where the issues Micheline highlighted would have been identified).

Lynne – for bullet 2 below, can you provide Andy with a sentence that demonstrates that GLOW has a plethora of global citizenship resources covering topics other than Israel/Palestine? Can you respond to Andy and colleagues as soon as you can?

Andy - note of the meeting para 4 does not quite capture the position in Scotland. I've lightly edited it (attached) to reflect what has been the case in Scotland since before CfE. The process for the next steps would be as follows.

Education Scotland will work with the partners involved to look again at the range of resources, the response to the consultation and any additional materials that may have been placed on Glow since the consultation. Once the partners are content, Education Scotland can arrange for the materials to be piloted and responses to be collated and analysed. All partners can suggest schools for piloting. Thereafter, any further changes required can be agreed by the partners before the Glow site is made more widely available. Materials can remain password protected on Glow throughout this period. Education Scotland will also help to identify an 'owner' of the materials within a local authority.

(Mary – I know you are on inspection and we have not discussed fully but if you pick up this email you may wish to comment on the above)

Kate please can you review the draft reply to [redacted], which has been sitting with private office for several weeks now (since mid April) and review whether it needs to be further changed etc.

Once Alan has replied we can put our heads together about the 'next steps' letter.

Thanks,
Sue
